TILLMAN TALKS TO THE CONSTITUTION.

THE CAMPAIGN IN SOUTH CAROLINA,

In Which the Country Is Pitched Against the Town.

THE OPINION OF THE MOVEMENT

Graphically Told by Its Recognized Moses.

THE MEETING IN COLUMBIA TODAY.

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 23 .- [Special.]-Tomorrow is a momentous day in the most momentous campaign South Carolina has had

It is so serious that Senators Hampton and Butler have come home from Washington to speak at the meeting, and the strongest timber in the state is out.

The state of public excitement can hardly be understood until it has been seen.

Tiliman has been working on the farmers' movement for five years, and it has such momentum that the great wave of enthusiasm rolled over ten counties without a break. The farmers are enthused almost to a frenzy of excitement, and yelling crowds have attended Tillman wherever he has been. At Laurens they hailed him as their savior, and several times the demonstration almost amounted to

THE MEETING OF TODAY. The beginning and end of this matter are described by Captain Tillman in the interview

This is the culmination of the work of five years, and the pent-up bitterness of all that time is launched upon the state in one angry flood. Tillman has steadily attacked the state government, and has held it up to the common people as an awful example of laxity and mismanagement. He accuses nine senators of perjury, and has brought the farmers to believe that under the present system of nomination by county clubs and conns, self-government is a myth. On the contrary, his attacks upon the aristocracy and urban population have created among the upper classes a bitter hatred of him, and I constantly hear the vilest epithets applied to him. So far has this gone that his home paper, at Edgefield, said that Tillman would bring a guard of two hundred red shirts with him to mbia to protect him from violence.

The speaking will occur at the fair ground at 11 o'clock tomorrow, and Senators Hampton and Butler and the three gubernatorial candidates, Mr. Tillman, General Bratton and General Earle, will speak.

Colonel John C. Haskell, the flery and impetuous leader of the South Carolina house of resentatives, will also be heard from, and his speech is expected to be the sensation of

He will defend the state government from Tillman's charges, and will reply to his charge that senators were perjured and the house was bamboozled and debauched by railroads. A collision between Haskell and Tillman is not Improbable. Seats have been provided for 3.000 and down in the arena for 3.000 more. THE STORY TOLD BY TILLMAN.

Captain Tillman came in at 4 o'clock, and is at the Grand Central. I found him a medium-sized man, with one eye. His visage is rugged, but he is quick, and the one remaining eye sparkles with a strange luster. He lay on his bed, drinking glass after glass of nonade to keep down a fever. There I found him, and got our interview.

My interview with Captain Tillman began

"What started this ?"

"The origin of the agitation was in 1885, at 3 meeting of the Agricultural and Mechanical society at Bennettsville, when I made a speech advocating the control of the agricultural de partment by the farmers, and that we should have a better system of agricultural education in this state. The resolutions on that line were voted down, and then I renewed the fight in the News and Courier, in which I wrote, I Suppose, ten letters during November and De-

"The result of the agitation was a convention of farmers in April, 1886, at Columbia, at which resolutions, incorporating these and other demands, were passed. Another convention was held in November, and a perma-nent organization, called 'The Farmers' Association,' was formed, and the demands of the April convention were reiterated. "The legislature paid no heed, except that a bill to reorganize the agricultural bureau and give it in charge to the farmers, passed the onse and was postponed in the senate. Difletters appeared from time to time during the years 1886, 1887 and 1888, and another farmers' convention in November, 1887, again demanded these reforms. The re sult was the enlargement of the university to treble its former number of professors, an increase of its income from $30,000 to $67,000, including the Hatch fund. It had nine prosors and five assistants in 1886, and now has teen professors and ten assistants. "The agricultural bureau was reorganized, but not according to the wishes of the Farmers' association. The control of it remained virtually in the hands of those who are opposed to

THE AGITATION RESUMED. "The agitation ceased for a while, but the death of Mr. Clemson and the donation of the Fort Hill property, Calhoun's old homestead, with $60,000 in money and bonds, for the establishment of such a school as we had asked for, re-opened the whole fight. This occurred in April, 1888, and the executive committee of the Farmers' association immediately met, and issued an address urging the people to renew the fight and put in the field to canvass the state with Governor lichardson, not as a candidate for governor, but merely as a representative of these ideas. The farmers had no candidate. We placed none in the field, but when the state convention met, the dissatisfaction was so great that we only lacked twenty-five votes of having enough to elect application was so great that we only lacked twenty-five votes of having enough to elect application was so great that we only lacked twenty-five votes of having enough to elect application was so great that we only lacked twenty-five votes of having enough to elect application was so great that we only lacked twenty-five votes of having enough to elect application was so great that we only lacked twenty-five votes of having enough to elect application was so great that we only lacked twenty-five votes of having enough to elect any beautiful to the senate had been such as to gain our confidence, and by some mistake, which has never been clearly explained, while we believed General Earle would stand, after the ballot had commenced in the convention his name was withdrawn by his own brother, and the convention are find that the world not accept the nomination if tendered him. We were thus left in the lurch, but the anti-Richardson sentiment was so strong that we polled 125 votes any oril, 1888, and the executive committee of way, which lacked only thirty-five of electing.

"The legislature elected that year accepted the Clemson bequest, after a hard fight, but Governor Richardson refused to sign the bill. At the session of 1889, the supreme court having in the meantime decided that the will of Mr. Clemson was valid, the governor signed the bill, and again, after a hard fight an appropriation of $40,000 was made to commence the college buildings. During these four years, in addition to the agitation for the college, a strong sentiment in regard to the extravagance and general laxity in the conduct of the government's mismanagement in every way had grown up; and the fear that we would lose the advantage we had gained in regard to the school, and that it would be starved, and also a desire to reform the government, the executive committee of the Farmers' association issued the famous Schell manifesto of February.

"The call for a convention resulted in the

"The call for a convention resulted in the assembling of 235 delegates, representing thirty of the total of thirty-five counties.

That convention adopted a platform of ten demands in substance as follows:

"It begins with a pledge to abide the arbitraments of the democratic party. The first demand is that all nominations be made by primary elections. The next reapportionment of representation in the democratic convention to be based on the census of 1880 is demanded. The fourth demand is that the board of agriculture be abolished, and the tax on fertilizers and everything pertaining to agriculture, or mechanics, or industrial education, be under control of the trustees of the common college. The fifth demand is that the South Carolina college be supported as a classical and literary institution. A reconstitution of the school districts, enlarged power for the railroad commison, the lease of the phosphate beds at public auction, and a constitutional convention, are the other important demands."

The Governorship.

THE GOVERNORSHIP.

"In addition to the adoption of this platform, I was put forward as the nominee of the reform wing of the democratic party for governor. Candidates for other state-house offices have come forward of their own volition. The have come forward of their own volition. The campaign opened with two preliminary speeches, one at Ridgeway and one at Anderson. The regular canvass ordered by the state democratic committee commenced at Greenville, on the 10th of June, and this is the beginning of the third week. The meeting tomorrow is the tenth of the series of thirty-five discussions ending on the 5th of August."

"What obout the question of primaries?"

"In my opening speech at Ridgeway, and at several other places, I have urged that we have delegates elected by primaries. In a speech Saturday, the proposition was made by General Earle, that all the candidates sign a petition to the executive committee to order a convention elected by primaries.

"Here is the situation: You can't change the primaries until a convention meets to do it and enveronments are affected that if that if that if

"Here is the situation: You can't change the primaries until a convention meets to do it, and our opponents are afraid that if that convention meets it will nominate me."

"What about these charges of corruption?"

"I have never-charged any corruption on the state government, except that the senators who voted against reapportionment were perjured. The constitution provided that there should be a census in 1875, and every tenth year thereafter, which would have caused a census to be taken in 1885. In 1884 the house passed a bill to have the census taken, and nineteen senators voted against and defeated it. In 1885 a bill was introduced appropriating money to allow the governor to take the census under another provision of the constitution, and the same nineteen senators again defeated it, but they passed a constitutional amendpassed a constitutional amend-ment allowing the United States census of 1880 to be taken as the basis of ap-portionment, and submitted the same to the people. The people voted for it, and the new legislature of 1886 ratified it. Under that legislature of 1886 ratified it. Under that new constitutional amendment, a bill was offered to reapportion the representation according to the population by the census of 1880, and nine of the nineteen men who had voted against the appropriation for the government to take a census in 1885, then voted for the constitutional amendment on the plea that it saved money, voted against reapportionment, under the constitutional amendment, thus proving that they were not sincere in their plea that their purpose in voting in their plea that their purpose in voting against—our census was to save money, and that their purpose was to defeat a just apportionment, and allow Charleston and Columbia to hold representation to which they were not entitled. One of these is Judge Izlar, about where they have been beying a purch.

entitled. One of these is Judge Izlar, about whom they have been howing so much.

"These nine senators, sworn to support the constitution of South Carolina, over-rode it first in 1884, when they refused to take the census. They over-rode it in 1885, when they refused to take the census. They over-rode it in 1885, when they refused to give the governor money with which to take the census. They voted for a constitutional amendment, which was their excuse for not having passed a bill to take it, and when the constitutional amendment was ratified they refused to apportion under it, clatming that the thing must go over to 1890. They, therefore, stand convicted of having broken their oaths of office, and I say are perjured."

"OTHER ISSUES IN THE CAMPAION.

"Is there anything in this campaign but the election of certain candidates?"

"The essence of the light, so far as I feel and election of certain candidates?"

"The essence of the light, so far as I feel and can understand it, is the desire for self-government. Under our convention system, can understand it, is the desire for self-government. Under our convention system, necessitated by one party and our negro majority, we are compelled to vote the ticket. The regular democratic clubs meet and appoint delegates to the county convention. The county convention appoints delegates to Columbia, and it has always resulted that men not in sympathy with the idea of economy and progress have been nominated, and the people were forced to swallow inated, and the people were forced to swallow them in November without having heard and them in November without having heard and seen them, and this is the first campaign in the history of the state for over a generation in which candidates for governor have been forced to go on the hustings and discuss public issues before the masses. That is the reason why I said we had never had democratic government here.

"Under the old constitution, which was in force up to 1860, the governor and state officers were elected by the legislature, and that legislature was controlled, especially in the senate, by the five coast counties, which had eighteen senators—a majority of the senate. These senators—a majority of the senate. These counties were the homes of the old aristocratic rice planters. Under the old system the family and money constituted the aristocthe family and money constituted the aristocracy, and a man sprung from the common people could only carve his way to distinction by joining it. The South Carolina college was the nursery, and it got to such a pass that very few. except graduates of that institution, ever received any preferment. The present fight is to prevent a continuance or re-establishment of the old system, and to do away with the nomination by conventions, equivalent to an election, which has resulted hitherto in the selection of men in sympathy with the old order of things."

THE OUTLOOK.

THE OUTLOOK.

"What's the outlook?"
"I am not misleading you nor deceiving myself when I tell you that I have spoken in ten counties, and I will carry every one of them. I look for a large anti-Tillman demonstration tomorrow. You will find the incorstration tomorrow.

BUYING UP VOTES WITH BIG PENSIONS.

INGALLS'S BID FOR SUPPORT.

He Declares That Every Soldier Should be on the Roll

SIMPLY BECAUSE HE HAD SERVED.

The Federal Election Bill to Come Up,

BUT THE SENATE WILL SIT DOWN ON IT,

WASHINGTON, June 23 .- [Special.] - Senator Ingalls created quite a sensation in the senate chamber this afternoon, by speaking out in favor of a service pension.

He went decidedly further than any man in either the senate or house has yet gone. He favored pensioning every man who served in the union army, whether he be disabled or perfectly sound

THE STATEMENT DRAWN OUT. Senator Gorman, of Maryland, brought the Kansas man out, by stating that this government had already paid out in cash in the shape of pensions to the union soldiers $110,000,000.

"What does that amout to," said the Kansas senator. "It matters not what it costs. Every soldier who served in the union army should be paid for his services. We owe them much more than this. When the war opened our property was only worth $1,600,000,000. Now it is worth $5,000,-000,000. We owe them this difference, and then we owe every man for the time he served in the army. We owe every one of them as much as they could have made outside had they not served in the army."

A BID FOR VOTES.

Indeed, Senator Ingalls took the most advanced ground yet taken by any man of either party. It was a home-consumption speech. He made it to secure the soldier's vote in his contest for re-election, in which the Farmers' alliance is fighting him. However, as Ingalls is one of the leaders of his party, his utterances to a certain extent will be taken as the views of his party. Indeed, it does seem, as Senator Vest said this afternoon, that the republican party is using the people's money to distribute in the shape of pensions, partly for the purpose of perpetuating their power. They are simply using their power to buy voters with government funds in pensions, rather than to go down into their own pockets for the withal to purchase the number of votes

THE BILL AS PASSED. The pension bill as passed the senate this afternoon, and which is now ready for the president's signature, provides for the pensioning of all dependent soldiers who served for three months or more in the union army. It is estimated, from careful calculations, that it will take $75,000,000 out of the treasury the first year, and $100,000,000 the second year. In other words, it will increase the pension rolls to something between two hundred and fifty million annually, of which $75,000,000 will have to be paid by the people of the south, who get nothing in return. THE RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

The president has given out that he unless the appropriation is cut down, as the senate has amended it. The appropriation runs up to twenty-five millions. president says he will not sign a bill of more than twenty millions, and it is probable the conference committee of the two houses will scale it down to this figure.

THE NEW COMMISSIONER. William M. Lindsey, of Kentucky, was to day appointed commissioner of the World's fair in place of Mr. Sam Inman. Hon. Patrick Walsh, of Augusta, was appointed alternate. This will be as much a surprise to Mr. Walsh as any one. He was not an applicant for the place, and probably never thought of it. He, however, met Mr. Harrison some months ago, and made quite an impression upon the man in the whitehouse.

Hugh Colquitt is here.

THE FEDERAL ELECTION LAW. The programme, as arranged by Reed and his pirates, is to take up the federal election law bill tomorrow. It will be debated until Saturday, and then passed. There are one hundred democrats in the house who have preceded speeches against the bill, and want to deliver them. However, in the short time allowed, probably not one-fourth of them will get time, as an equal number of republicans want to wave the ensanguined garment. While the bill will pass the house, it will probably meet its doom in the senate, for the fifteen republican senators who voted for free coinage, have announced that neither the tariff bill nor the federal election law shall receive their votes until Reed allows a square vote on free coinage. These senators watched the silver fight in the house with much interest, and are awaiting an opportunity to retaliate on Reed for his gagging process to kill free coinage. However, whether or not Mr. Reed allows a vote on free coinage, and he will not, the chances are that the senate will never pass the federal election law bill. Ingalls and Edmunds have refused to be parties to changing the rules. The western silver men are both against a change of sible they might be whipped into line on a federal election law bill, but without a change of rules the domocrats will never allow a vote. Senators Butler, Gorman and Morgan have announced that they are prepared to speak thirty days each on the bill, and that alone would carry the session to October with-out a vote. Therefore unless Reed and Lodge can persuade Vice-President Morton to change the rules and adopt Reed's gag laws, the bill can never pass. It is not believed Morton has the nerve to do this. AGRICULTURAL COLLEGES.

The Senate Passes the Bill to Aid Them-Other Business Transacted. Washington, June 23.—Mr. Allison was excused from service on the select committee to examine into the administrative service of the senate, and Mr. Plumb was appointed in

Mr. Ingails offered a resolution (which was agreed to) instructing the committee on privileges and elections to inquire as to the date when, under the law and precedents, the salaries of senators from Montana, Washington and North and South Dakota began.

The senate resumed the consideration of the agricultural college aid bill, and Mr. Morrill offered a substitute for the various amendments pending on Saturday, as to the division of the fund between colored and white schools

MR. PUGH WITHDRAWS HIS AMENDMENT.
Mr. Pugh, who had offered the first amendment on that point, said that he had examined Mr. Morrill's amendment and that it covered all points that he was aiming at. He withdrew his own amendment, and hoped that Mr. Mor-rill's would be accepted. Messrs. Hale, Chan-dler and Gibson also withdrew their amenddler and Gibson also withdrew their amendments.

Mr. Colquitt asked Mr. Morrill as to the preportions in which the fund was to be distributed between the colored and white colleges.

Mr. Morrill said that the proportion was not fixed. That was left to the state legislature.

Mr. Morrill's amendment was adopted. It provides that in any state in which there has been one agricultural college established under the act of 1862, and in which also there is or may be an educational institution of a like character for colored students aided by the state from its own revenue, however named or styled, there shall be a'just and equitable division of the fund to be received under this act made by the legislature.

SENATOR BLAIR STRIS THEM UP.

Mr. Blair made a remark to the effect that it was from a southern senator, Mr. Pugh, that the proposition came to give the colored schools a share of the fund, and that no northern man had thought of it.

Mr. Hawley resented the remark, and said that the bill had originally contained a provision that no money should be paid where a distinction of race or color was made, but that the establishment and maintenance of separate colleges for white and colored students would be in compliance with the act.

Mr. Ingalls also resented Mr. Blaine's remarks. He frankly confessed that the proposition to disburse the fund among the white and colored schools could not, with propriety, come from a northern senator. His instincts and his convictions were against it. The necessity could arise only in a southern state. The senator from Alabama, therefore, had logically offered his amendment to adapt the bill to a condition of things which existed in the south, and so Mr. Ingalls cordially gave his assent to it.

Mr. Hawley thanked Mr. Ingalls for his bill to a condition of things which existed in the south, and so Mr. Ingalls cordially gave his assent to it.

Mr. Hawley thanked Mr. Ingalls for his speech. For himself, he would have but one agricultural college in each state, and it would be for every person whom the Lord made fit to go into school. That was the way he would have it; but he yielded to this other proposition because it seemed best on the whole. Some formal amendments were made to the bill, and it was then passed. It appropriates annually out of any money in the treasury, not otherwise appropriated, arising from the sale of public lands, to be paid to each state and territory for the more complete endowment and maintenance of colleges for the benefit of agricultural and mechanical arts now established or which may be hereafter established, in accordance with an act of congress, approved July 2, 1862, the sum of $15,000 for the year ending June 30, 1890, and an annual increase of the amount of such appropriation thereafter for ten years by an additional sum of $1000 over the pre-30, 1890, and an annual increase of the amount of such appropriation thereafter for ten years by an additional sum of $1,000 over the preceding year, and the annual amount to be paid therefor to each state and territory shall be $25,000, provided that no money shall be paid out under this act to any state or territory for the support and maintenance of a college when distinction of race or color is made in the admission of students, but the establishment and maintenance of such colleges separately for white and colored students shall be held to be in compliance with the provisions of this act; and also, provided that in any state in which there has been one agricultural college established under the act of 1862, and in which also there is, or may be, an educational institution of like character for colored students, aided by the state from its own revenue (however named or styled), there shall be a just and equitable division of the fund to be received under this act.

fund to be received under this act.

THE REFORT ON DEFENDENT FENSIONS.

The conference report on the dependent pension bill was taken up and became the subject of a long discussion. The bill was opposed by Messrs. Vest, Berry and Gorman, and championed by Messrs. Davis, Teller and Ingalls. Other senators who took part in the discussion were Messrs. Blair, Turple, Hawley and Hale.

When the vote was taken, the conference report was agreed to—yeas 34, nays 18, as follows:

On motion of Mr. Blount, the clause legalizing the occupancy by a railroad company of ing the occupancy by a railroad company of streets and grounds for stations was stricken from the bill.

Washington, June 23.—The senate today confirmed the nomination of John R. Mizell, collector of customs, Pensacola.

The first estimate of the population of the District of Columbia, as made by Superintendent Porter today, is 228,160. The population in 1880 was 177,624. The increase during the last ten years is therefore about twenty-nine per cent. The population in 1870 was 131,700 and in 1860, 75,080.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., June 23.-Reports which are absolutely reliable, have reached San Antonio of a seditious and revolutionary movement going on in the states of Mexico, bordering on the Rio Grande. Papers however friendly to Mexico and the Diaz administration can no longer suppress the news. The locality, but it is undoubtedly wide-spread. It is claimed an evidence of Diaz's intentions very shortly of declaring himself dictator of Mexico. General Reyse, governor of Nuevo Leon, heretofore a not very strong supporter of Diaz, has been offered the portfolio of minister of war, and has had the effect of quieting his discontent, and Governor Gerza Galan, of discontent, and Governor Gerza Galan, of Coahnila, who has always been an avowed enemy of President Diaz, has been in the City of Mexico for the past several months, where it is claimed that he is being restrained by force, amounting almost to imprisonment.

All telegraph lines in Mexico are under rigid control of the federal government, and it is practically impossible to get any direct information pertaining to the uprising now in progress in Nuevo Leon. The cause of the trouble is the strong centralizing tendencies of the Diaz government which, as far as the border states are concerned.

THEY CHANGED THEIR MIND And Struck Several Clauses From the Licens ing Bill. London, June 23 .- During the sitting of the house of commons this afternoon, William Henry Smith, government leader, announced that the government had decided to withdraw the licensing clauses of the local taxation bill. Mr. Smith said that the government had arrived at the conclusion that it would be impossible to pass the license clause of the bill in its entirety. [Prolonged opposition cheers.] The clause contained three proposals. First, that a certain portion of the new taxation on intoxicants be appropriated for the purpose of extinguishing licenses; second, that power be conferred on country councils to purchase and extinguish licenses; and, third, that the issue of new licenses be suspended. The first proposal had received the assent of the house, both on the second reading and in the committee stage, as far as England was concerned. The government would, therefore, proceed with the proposal as affecting Scotland and Ireland. With the second proposal the gov-ernment would not proceed, but they would ask the house to allow the money for the extinction of licenses to accumulate until parliament should direct otherwise. [Opposition THE GOVERNMENT'S AMENDMENT.

The third proposal was approved by all se tions of the house and would remain. In consonnace with their decision, the government would ask the house to agree to an amendment whereby the moneys allotted to extinguish licenses should be invested or accumu-lated until an act be passed directing how to apply them. The ministers trusted that a practical result of the change would be that the money would remain ear-marked for the purpose of extinguishing licenses under any reform of licensing laws to which parliament with assent. ment might assent.

Mr. Caine asked whether the government intended to introduce an alteration in the licensing laws to which the amendment might apply.

Mr. Smith said he thought Mr. Caine ought to be satisfied to postpone such a question until a later state in the history of parliament. Sir Wilfred Lawson warned the ministers that the opposition would be steadfast to every form of proposal to purchase license.

Mr. Gladstone expressed partial satisfaction at Mr. Smith's announcement, but said that the proposed amendment threatened a difficulty. It would be better for the government to consider the propriety of giving up the idea the proposed amendment threatened a difficulty. It would be better for the government to consider the propriety of giving up the idea of ear-marking the money. It was of no practical effect. Its withdrawal would, in no wise weaken the position of the government, and its entire withdrawal would simplify debate.

Mr. Smith said he appreciated the spirit in which Mr. Gladstone spoke, but the government could not disregard the fact that the principle of purchase had received the approval of a large majority of the house. [Cries of 'Only four."] At all events, the money accumulated would be at the disposal of parliament. [Cries of "Hear! Hear!"]

Mr. Timothy Healy—It is clear that the government means to leave the money for the extinction of licenses.

Mr. Storey asked whether there was any precedent for such a proposal, and Mr. Smith replied: "The thing has been done."

Mr. Darlin—If the ear-marking proposal be passed, will it in anyway prevent parliament from dealing with the money as it pleases?

Mr. Smith—Nothing will prevent parliament from dealing with the money in any way it may choose."

Sir William Vernon Harcourt said he supposed that if a future session of parliament did not approve the application of money to the purchase of licenses, the accumulated funds could not be used for any other purpose without the assent of the house of lords. [Opposition cheers.] If that was the real meaning of Mr. Smith's proposal, the government had done nothing to shorten the session. [Cries of "Hear!" "Hear!" and cheers.]

Mr. Smith thought the government would be able to satisfy the house on the subject. In the meantime, he asked the house to delay discussion until the amendment was reached.

LONDON, June 23.—The Mark Lane Express says: English wheats are dull. At a decline of sixpence sales of English week were 44,229 quarters at 329, 9d per quarter, against 57,337 quarters at 3,258d for the corresponding week last year. Flour weak and suppose lower.

Foreign wheats depressed. Red winter grades 2d lower and Indian and Russian 6d lower. Oats firm. Linseed pure dripped 6d. FIRST, LAST AND FOREVER. After a calm and considerate discussion of the question, in all its bearings, the conclusion was reached that it would be necessary to secure concert of action, and that that could be done through the medium of an organized movement. And it was derided to form a Hardeman club in Atlanta.

The plans of the campaign, so far as Fulton is concerned, were only briefly outlined, but the Hardeman men are determined to have their candidate appear before the people of Atlanta, and so soon as the club is orsized, an invitation will be extended to Hon. Tom Hardeman to address the people of Atlanta and Fulton county.

THE CALL FOR THE MEETING will be issued Wednesday, and will contain the names of quite a large number of the

The Southern Alliance Farmer's Summary.

The Southern Alliance Farmer's Summary.

The Southern Alliance Farmer, on the editorial page of the issue of yesterday, sums up the situation, as viewed from an alliance standpoint, as follows:

This is an issue between the people and the politicians. Up the one side are the farmers, producers, laborers and conservative, industrious business men—the people. On the other side are the politicians and the self-constituted bosses. All are democrats, but, taking the word of Grover Cleveland for it, those who subscribe to the alliance principles are the most consistent democrats, for after reading the alliance declaration of purposes he said: "It is formed upon the purest democracy," and that the farmers should have organized long ago. Therefore we claim that those men who represent the people are the most consistent of all democrats.

We have always loved Colonel Hardeman, but now that he is arrayed against the alliance we oppose him.

Judge Snead will make his canvass on a repeal of the registration law, and the law providing for a county board of assessors. Judge Snead has been carrying on a still-hunt for a long time and says he is certain to be elected. There are now four candidates: Hon. W. H. Fleming, Hon. Martin V. Calvin, E. T. It was kept secret for the time, until some of the men could be seen and asked if they would run if nominated.

At that meeting a great deal of interest centered on the name of General Longstreet as republican candidate for governor, as it was doubtless thought that he would stand a better chance than any other Georgia republican to split the vote of the people, owing to the great levotion for him so widely manifested by the old soldiers who fought under him. He has heard of the discussion that has been nietly going on among republicans for some me, about asking him to run for governor, and has already expressed himself as being edly opposed to having his name mentioned in this connection.

HON. W. H. BROUGHTON. He Talks About His Candidacy for Congress in the Eighth District.

W. A. Broughton, the noted farmer and prospective candidate for congress in the eighth district, was in Atlanta yesterday.

When asked if he had decided to run for congress, he said: "I have not, no. But I am considering the matter with quiet deliberation, and want to do what is best for the farmers of my section.

"I have been flattered with a very great pressure at the hands of my farmer friends all over the district asking me to enter the race. The alliance especially has shown a kindly interest in my probacandidacy, really inclined to respond in this as I have tried to do in all things in a way that will benefit the alliancemen. I shall decide this week whether I shall run or not."

Mr. Broughton is a farmer out and out. All of his interests are agricultural, and there is no doubt but that he will get a strong support from the farmers in the eighth. The Morgan county alliance has urged him to run for congress with the following resolu

Another lovely site for a hotel is also being discussed. It is the old Hoyel homestead lot. It lies beautifully, is well shaded and joins the right-of-way of the Georgia railroad on the north, and is about two hundred yards west of the Georgia railroad depot. It belongs to a Washington, Georgia, syndicate, who own several hundred acres of land on the north side of Decatur. The dummy line has been surveyed inmediately in front of the lot, and some think the line will be located there, going into Decatur on McDonough street.

If so, it would be well to ascertain if your blood is in good shape. If your blood is wrong you want S. S. S. (Swift's Specific), the great exterminator of Blood Poison. A General Breaking Down.

After suffering for years from a genera reaking down of the system, and after trying various proprietary medicines, without receiving any benefit, I commenced taking Swift's Specific (S. S. On last Friday evening, at Nicholson, the two met again, and during a discussion became involved in a difficulty. Ham drew his pistol, and Smith armed himself with rocks. Ham fired twice, but with no serious results. Being unsuccessful with his pistol, he then started for his house saying that he would get his shot-gun and kill Smith. He soon returned on the scene with it, and fired once at Smith wounding him fatally. Smith died very shortly afterwards. The murderer made good his escape, and up to this date has not been apprehended. The citizens of the vicinity are much incensed at such proceedings being carried on in their midst, and it is said will request Governor Gordon to offer a special reward for the capture of Ham.

Early this afternoon, a negro excursion train of fourteen cars came in over the Brunswick and Western road. Fifteen hundred negroes disembarked and, as usual, scattered over the town, some riding, others walking, and a majority of both sexes filling the various dancehalls, where they spent a few hours in hilar-ious drinking. The police expected, and were on the lookout for serious trouble, and their worst fears were realized.

THE FUN BEGINS.

At 7 o'clock a train pulled up to the depot, and swarms of darkies began to circulate in the vicinity. Several policemen were on the scene, and a reserve squad of off-duty men voluntarily awaited for the sounds of conflict. They were not disappointed, for, with a wheop, Jordan Jenkins moved through a crowded car, brandishing a long-bladed knife. Patrolmen Lamb and Horton collared him, and, with a few well-directed blows, haid him low. He was dragged out another negro desperado took his place, pistol in hand. The negro women urged the men to fight, but the presence of armed men cowed the darkies, and the field was soon partially deserted. HAMILTON'S SPRINGS.

Who is Delighted-A Good Old Town With a Hundred Advantages-Some Very Interesting Facts.

Hamilton, Ga., June 23.-[Special.]-This delightful summer resort begins to take on quite a lively spirit, as the people from the crowded cities are flocking here in search of health and pure air and good water.

"I never knew before this year," remarked a gentlament who had been sick and gentleman who had been sick and had come here to recuperate, "what a bracing and strengthening effect the atmosphere of Hamilton can produce." He said he had been to several watering places, and to one of north Georgia's most noted summer cities, but when he reached Hamilton there was an exhileration which he had failed to get

Hamilton is the ideal summer resort, where health is procured, and at the same time a fund of pleasure gathered which is the most delightful in the world. Good accomodations, beautiful, shaded walks, magnificent drives, splendid scenery and a hundred other attractions make this little village worth a visit.

The water is the best in the state. Every well is a fountain of health and every drink of the crystal fluid is a draught of life. "Drink water in Hamilton and grow stout and healthy," is an expression often heard. Obedience to the first injunction is invariably followed by the latter as an effect.

A few minutes' walk from the center of town, brings one to alittle spring, the waters of which have effected wonders, and which is sought far and near by people who believe its curative powers are not exceeded by those of any other water in the universe. Its surroundings are calculated to conjure health and life and a draught of the water brings with it a strength which makes life worth living.

In another direction the mud springs are an attraction. These springs are visited by people every year who are broken down in health and here they secure a new lease of life and a new interest in themselves.

West of Hamilton, situated at the foot of Pine mountain, and forming part of a wild and picturesque scene, is the blue spring. This, perhaps, is one of the greatest natural wonders in the south. The spring is very large, and it is averred by those who have tried to fathom its depth that it has no bottom. Indeed, it is stated by travelers that in Georgia's antipodes the inhabitants of the Orient visit a spring which is the counterpart of this one, and which gives life to thousands. This statement will not be vouched for by your correspondent, as he has never heard it positively asserted by the man who saw it. In this spring the water looks as blue as the sky, but the stream which flows from it goes down its rugged course, colorless and transparent.

From Hamilton these springs are easily accessible, and *stay of a few ATLANTA, GA., JUNE 24, 1890. Private Dalzell Threatens War.

Private Dalzell, to use a phrase more expressive than elegant, is "on his ear" again, and threatens to break up the present session of congress and destroy the government altogether if the soldiers who fought, bled and contracted malaria during the war are not turned into the treasury at once and allowed to help themselves.

The general impression is that they have been helping themselves for some time past; but, having exhausted the old surplus, they are crying "for more." and must have it, or else the government will be turned upside flown, or perhaps destroyed altogether.

The veterans' reunion at Caldwell, Ohio, gave birth to the latest rumpus among the ension grabbers, and has started Private Dalzell on the warpath. At this reunion, resolutions were passed favoring a service pension bill, demanding the repeal of "the rascally limitation act." and demanding the rodification of the pension laws, so-to quote the language of the resolution-"that we may get our pensions before we die." The resolution winds up with this flourish of trumpets: "This is our ultimatum, and defeat at the polls awaits every senator and member of congress who fails to secure this legislation before the election of 1890. So help our God."

It will be seen from this that the veterans mean business, and nothing but complete possession of the pension office will satisfy them. Private Dalzell says that they mean just what they say, and have two million votes in their hands to make good their

This is a sad state of affairs truly, and in view of the fact that the treasury has already been depleted by the pension demands made upon it, and that even honest and fair-minded republicans have been heard to protest against the extravagance in this line, we may well wonder what the veterans would be at in thus threatening to overthrow the government if they are not given moreand more-and more!

It was once thought that Mr. Garfield was too liberal in this matter of pensions; but it will be remembered that he drew a limit. above which he said appropriations for pension purposes should never be allowed to go. That limit was long ago exceeded by millions of dollars, and yet-while on the one side the government is being abused for its exressive liberality to the old soldiers, on the other we find these soldiers swearing that they have been shamefully mistreated, and demanding the unconditional surrender of the treasury into their hands. This pension business is getting to be great nuisance; for years past, it has been dinned into the people's ears, and they are thoroughly tired of it. An evil shadow seems to hang over the pension office itself, and in one way and another its affairs have been standing disgrace to the country; and his life toward her be, "Nothing too good it is likely to be such for years to come, for for her, who hath so much deserved." instead of dying out, as all good veterans this: uld, the old soldiers are increasing in the land, and there is no rest for the weary!

Slain by His Party.

"Once a politician, always a politician." At least, it is that way with some men. With a certain class, to have once held public office means either to hold it forever, or to starve to death in the hope of getting it again when once it is lost. Robert J. Gibson, of New York, a staunch republican, embarked on the sea of politics. For years he prospered; but at length reverses came, and he was left penniless. He appealed to his party and was promised a government position.

From time to time he was put off with promises; for five months he kept hoping against despair and waiting for the letter that never came. The wolf was at his door he saw poverty staring him in the face, and could stand it no longer.

So he "went the rounds," bade his old friends good-bye, then walked to the entrance of the New York hospital and blev his brains out with a revolver. He is only one of many who have died a political death, so to speak; who have worked for a party, only to be slain by its

The mistake that such men make, how ever, is in waiting on the favors of a party, which is apt to forget them altogether. Even a politician might go out of his line and turn an odd penny occasionally, without losing any of his political prestige. The man who pins his faith to princes' favors is in a bad way.

Trouble in Tennessee.

There seems to be trouble in Tennessee The clans over there are gathering for an exciting state campaign, and there are at least a half dozen prospective candidates for governor. This would be all right if there was perfect harmony in the democratic ranks, but we infer that there is not, taking the testimony of some of our Tennessee exchanges for truth

The Knoxville Tribune, for instance, has sounded a note of warning and is calling upon the democrats of the state to keep together and act harmoniously in the fight which is to come. The trouble seems to proceed from the county conventions, and, with reference to the one recently held in Knox county, the Tribune says that, if democrats would fight the republican enemy as hard as they fight each other, they would soon win their way through the radical citadels and be crowned with victory.

The Knox county convention, it is said, was democratic only in name; there was nothing to distinguish it from the common republican pow-wow, except the absence of negroes. The Knoxville Tribune says that over four hours six hundred men, calling themselves democrats, "resolved the into a mob of the whole," and when the convention adjourned they had accomplished nothing.

This may be only a one-sided view of it, and the strife among the Knox county democrats may be confined to that section alone; but this appeal to democrats to act harmoniously is in order, and the democracy of Tennessee will do well to profit by it. Their campaign will be an exciting one, and the charge that one county has been turned over to the republicans at a time when there was an opportunity to win a democratic victory, is a serious one, which should make th democrats put on their thinking caps and close up the ranks, so that no gaps will be

We have no desire to interfere with the politics of Tennessee; but as a southern sister state, we are interested in its welfare, and we turn aside from our own campaign, which is progressing so pleasantly, to wish our Tennessee friends a safe journey and council them to do their fighting, not among themselves, but against the common enemy who is seeking to occupy every inch of ground which their neglect makes available.

The Graduate's Mother.

For the graduate's "daddy" we have had prose-song of remembrance. In the grace, the glory and splendid achievements of his ambitious son, the old man had been forgotten, or merely "overlooked." We brought him forth and praised him before the people. Did the graduate's mother, standing with silvered temples by her husband's side, feel piqued because she did not hear her name linked in mutual praise, as it is in mutual love, with his own?

Perhaps she did; and lest she should think that she has been forgotten, we take her by the tender, wrinkled hand, and lead her to the light.

Behold her, all ye people! The snows of wild winters of care have whitened her hair, but they have whitened her heart as well Through long years of patient love and tireless endeavor she has watched over this boy who now stands to the front, flushed with triumph, and hears his name voiced in the roar of the galleries; who is pelted with roses, fresh from the white hands of lovely womanhood, and faces the future under the golden auspices of Alma Mater.

Whatever pride his father feels in him is far excelled by hers; whatever sacrifices he has made to place him there, so proudly be fore the world, they are as nothing when compared with the sacrifices she has made; whatever faith his father has had in him is weak beside the loval and limitless love, the unreserved devotion, with which his mother has crowned him.

Her boy has been her sole thought day and night; she has plead for him, prayed for him, suffered for him; and now, as she sits silent, but with glowing countenance, in the applauding audience, the tears that trickle down her cheek spring straight from the overflowing fountain of her heart. And they are tears of joy. Let not the mother be forgotten; let her son, the orator of the day, single her out from the crowd, and breathe a benediction on her head. This is her triumph, too; she has lived for it, longed for it, hoped for it, prayed for it, and now she weeps and thanks God, to whose keeping she entrusted her boy, when he left the shelter of a mother's

All honor to the graduate's mother! After all, the mothers make the men-the best men that we have. All honor to her; and let the graduate do her honor, for it may be that with her needle she has made the means which brought him greatness.

Let him love and cherish her forever. Let him thank her on reverent knee for all she has done for him, and let the sentiment of

'I would have hid her needle in my heart To have saved her finger from a little scratch No deeper than the skin.'

Lively Times in Louisiana.

She has given her all for him; may he never forget it.

There are lively times in the Louisians legislature over the lottery question, and the recent arrest of a prominent member of that body on the charge of accepting a bribe for his influence in behalf of the lottery company has given a sensational turn to the fight, and worked the lottery and anti-lottery men up to white heat. The state press. of course, is taking sides in the matter, and Governor Nicholls is being pretty roughly handled by some of the editors. The arrest of Representative St. Amant is severely commented on by the New Orleans States. It is characterized by that paper as an outrage. with the planning of which Governor Nicholls had much to do. It says that the plot was to arrest Mr. St. Amant on the floor of the house just as a vote was being taken, in order to create a sensation and cause a stampede among the members who are in favor of submitting the lottery question to the people, and thus defeat the bill now pending in the house.

Commenting on this, the New Orleans States pours the vials of its wrath upon the head of Governor Nicholls, and deals its thunder out in right lively fashion. It says: "The desperate plot of Governor Nicholls and his anti-lottery following is a disgrace to the state of Louisiana and an insult to the general assembly. Never before in the political history of the democratic party in this or any other state has a more foul conspiracy been hatched to discredit and crush representative of the people in order to defeat a question upon which democrats have divided within the party. The infamous plot to arrest a member on the floor of the house and drag him off to jail on a charge of bribery, without any investigation, but merely upon information received, is an outrage which will be denounced by all fairminded men from one end of the state to the other."

It would appear from these proceedings that the advocates of the lottery and those who are against it are overheating themselves in the fight and losing their tempers entirely. People will be unwilling to believe that Gov ernor Nicholls, fully aware of the gravity of such an offense, would, without grounds for such a proceeding, lend his influence to a conspiracy against any one, especially a member of the state legislature and a man prominent in public affairs. Whatever the governor's prejudices may be, on whatever side his sympathies may be enlisted, it does not seem reasonable that he would have employed unjust and tyrannical methods to give expression to them.

In any case, the remedy is with Mr. St.

Amant; the burden of proof remains with him; he is the man to prove the right or wrong of the governor's course, and then let the public make up the verdict when the evidence is in. The whole thing, however, has an ugly look; if the arrested legislate is guilty of the charge against him, it will badly on the legislature as a body, and if he is innocent, the governor will be in a bad light before the people.

In the meantime the people are as warn as the weather over the lottery question, and there is more trouble brewing on both sides.

Mr. Blaine Comes to the Front. We want a word with Mr. William Mc Kinley. He made a speech at the Atlanta Chautauqua some time ago, in which he shadowed forth in unmistakable terms the singular beauties of republican protection We are not sure that the speech was a suc cess. It convinced nobody, and made n converts. It was a cold and dreary affair that was intended, as the players say, to "place some paper." The paper was placed and the speech was made, and nobody was hurt except a few sensitive editors who in agined that a protection speech in the south was calculated to engulf the country in ruin. Since that speech was made, Mr. William McKinley has concocted a bill which he aimed at the very vitals of the country, hitting the poor man in his tenderest spots. That bill has been hastily endorsed by all the republican organs, by Mr. Robert P. Porter, our great census operator, and by all the humble reporters who dance attendance on the republican editors.

The bill, however, has not commended it self to Brother Blaine, who, although he has given himself over to Mr. Harrison and his friends, still remains the great repub lican leader. Mr. Blaine says that the Mc Kinley bill is infamous, and this is as far, perhaps, as any democrat could afford to go To say that the tariff bill is infamous, is to say that it is republican, and when Mr. Blaine, representing the administration. straddles the high horse of criticism, it is time for men like McKinley and the small republican editors to get to cover.

For the first time in a good many years Mr. Blaine seems to mean business. He has his epithets all polished and his armor on. He has given notice to the republican party that the McKinley idea of protection is no satisfactory to the present administration, and that it will not be endorsed by the great big little man who rattles around under his granddaddy's hat.

A Colored Orator, So-Called. Harvard's colored orator has been heard from. He has spoken his piece, and it has been printed in the newspapers. There are various comments on it, the most of them calculated to give a false idea of the address and the race which the orator represents.

There can be no doubt that the negro rator had a great opportunity before him. He might have spoken for his race. The time was rife for it, and the occasion a fitting one. Probably no negro has ever had such an opportunity. We did not expect anything great, nor anything overpowering, but we did expect this representative of his race to say something distinctive, something simple and touching, It is not culture that has the last word, nor education that gives the cue to greatness. Otherwise, Abraham Lincoln would have been a failure, and the republic itself would have gone undiscovered.

Perhaps it is not time for the negroes to speak; certainly the time has not come for their Harvard graduate to catch the ear of the country. We have read his speech with interest: we have read it prepared to criticize as well as to commend: but it is a turbulent and an incoherent affair without head or tail, having no relation whatever to anything that is of the slightest importance white

The Boston Globe has an editorial on the oration, and it is about everything except the oration-the standing of the students in the university, their color, their propensities, their sectionalism, and also their religious beliefs. All that is said of the speech is said in criticism; and it is to be remarked that the papers that are kindest are those that have ignored the colored orator's amplification of nonsense.

Perhaps THE CONSTITUTION ought to have ignored it too; but we allude to it, not to discredit the race, but to say that there is not to be found in Georgia the commonest corn-field hand who has not a distincter message to deliver to the public than this colored graduate from Harvard.

plan to raise funds for the University of Georgia. His plan is to appoint a state centennial commit-tee whose duty it shall be to appoint in each tee whose duty it shall be to appoint in each county of the state a committee of the local alumni. This last committee will establish a county organization of the society residing in each county, securing every resident alumnus as a member. Then let there be gotten up by the central committee an obligation legal and binding in its effect; yet appealing in a proper manner to each alumnus to aid in the common cause, which each local committee appointed by the local or-ganization shall see to it—is presented to each alumnus to sign, agreeing to give annually—pay-able quarterly, if necessary—not less than ten dollars per year (and many would give much more), to be collected by the county committee and turned over to the central tee and by them delivered to the board of committee and by them delivered to the board of trustees of the university, to be expended to the interest of the university in any channel they may think best to apply it. There are a thousand alumni in Georgia. In this way, at least ten thousand dollars could be raised each year. There is not one out of ten alumni but what would be glad to give at least ten dollars. There are one hundred of the alumni who would freely give $50 each; three There are one hundred of the alumni who would freely give $50 each; one hundred, $25 each; three hundred, $15 each; five hundred, $16 each; realizing on this hypothesis $17,000 the first year. The local committee need not confine its labor to inducing alumni to this schedule, but could, without discredit to the society, appeal to any liberal citizen outside of the alumni. The plan

Have Run Their Last Race.

From the Illustrated American.

The death of Brother Ban, the popular race horse, at Morris park, in New York, brought tears to the eyes of many of the old sporting men. Fall of pluck to the last, the horse, in his struggles after failing, dragged himself up so that with head erect he had his feet under him, as if ready to make a grand spring to head off his rivals. Then he fell to the ground. His last race had been run, and he died with his eyes facing the goal. "Heart failure" was the cause of Brother Ban's death. We all know now, if we must believe all that the doctors tell us, that heart failure is simply exhaustion of the vital functions by overwork, worry of mind, and—fast driving through life beyond the natural gait. If the way horses are run now-a-days does not worry their "mind" it certainly does strain their physical strength, and like men who are overworked, they break down. The great El Rio Rey is now a "roater," broken down became overstrained in the efforts to outdo whatever was done before by him or any other horse in the way of speed. And so pass the greatest away in the struggle for the prizes of life. After all, call is

"heart failure" that makes a man, apparently in full bloom of youth, fall dead in the street, or Brother Ban, the horse, on the race track, or that makes El Rio Rey grow short of breath at every run, like the Wall street man who looses sleep and rest to crown a "corner" with success—it makes no difference. It is simply health weakened, life made short by disobedience to nature's laws. The man who kills himself has it in his power to make the world happier for himself and for man's best friend, the horse. But as the world goes nowadays, we suppose the contests for place between men, like those between the race-horses will continue the same.
"There are too many of us in the world now," said a western man one day, "and when one of us disappears ee is soon lost sight of." That may be true.

GREAT SNAKES.

Monsters Seventy Feet Long and Their From the New York Ledger.

Among the giants, the great snakes attract our attention, not only on account of their size but the enormous powers they evince. Some years ago, a friend of the writer was making a tour of India, stopping at many o the small towns and villages. At one place his servant reported that a big boa had se creted himself in a whole in the wall, and re-quested him to send for the snake-charmers and get rid of the brute; but the white man, and get rid of the brute; but the white many who was an old hunter, proposed to remove the enemy in his own fashion.

Inserting his arm in the crevice, he soon found the tail of the snake; and amid a vast his arm and sonirming, he pulled found the tail of the snake; and amid a vast amount of hissing and squirming, he pulled the greater part of its body out, upon which the servants ran away. Finally the neck ap-peared, and, taking a firmer grasp upon the tail, he jerked it out and immediately began to swing the great reptile around, in this way keeping the body out straight, and preventing its coiling about his body. Gradually he moved away, whirling the serpent round and round, until finally he dashed its head violently against a tree, and killed it.

Almost every country has its legend of Almost every country has its legend of enormous serpents. Every boy remembers the tale of the huge snake that was a menace to the army of Attilius Regulus, when it was marching on Carthage. The old Roman historians stated that the monster had to be killed by military engines which threw stones, and that when killed it was taken to Rome, where it selvin was found to measure one hum-and that when killed it was taken to Rome, where its skin was found to measure one hunbred and twenty feet in length. Even Pliny speaks of this serpent which was, of course, at least as regards length, a myth.

It is believed that the giant of the snake tribe is about forty feet in length, one of this size having been captured in Guiana, after a flerce struggle. A man was taking care of a boat while his comrades were in the woods, and, chancing to fall asleep, he was aroused by feeling something cold touch his feet. Opening his eyes, he found an enormous serpent across the boat, with every appearance of intending to dine upon him. As it happened, there was a gun at hand; so, grasping it, the sailor fired its contents into the snake's head, and while it dashed about in horrible contortions he pushed the about in horrible contortions he pushed the about in horrible contortions he pushed the boat out into the stream.

The snake tore down small trees, broke great boughs in its efforts to escape, and finally disappeared. When the crew returned a party was made up to follow the reptile, and it was finally discovered half a mile away, and dispatched by a blow on the head, given by a courageous native.

A gentleman living in Manila describes a serpent, which he had in an inclosure, estimated at fifty feet, its body being as big around as that of a large man.

as that of a large man.

A thirty-foot python once killed a man on the coast of Celebes. As in the case previously mentioned, a sailor was left upon the banks of a river and fell asleep. As his friends were returning, they heard shrieks, and hastened on to find him in the folds of a monster nython that had enveloped and liter-

Penang was in former times famous for its snakes, and a python killed here by a convict on the road to Telo Kumbar was found to measure twenty-eight feet in length.

These are giants, but how insignificant they appear compared to the reptiles, snake-like in appearance, of olden times! In the cretaceous period the world was populated with a race of giants, all forms seemingly being deveopled to enormous dimensions.

One strange creature, known as the elasmosaurus, ranged up to seventy feet in length, saurus, ranged up to seventy feet in length, nearly thirty of which were a long, slender nearly thirty of which were a long, slender neck resembling a snake.

This wonderful creature lived in a sea which covered what is now known as Kansas, and geologists find its remains where it was stranded, thousands of years ago. One giant was discovered by his head and flashing teeth exposed on a knoll, the surrounding soil having been washed away. By removing the earth, the head was traced to the body by the bones of the neck, and the entire skeleton finally uncovered.

Imagine a snake seventy feet long, its cen a tail and neck attenuated and small. Give a tail and neck attenuated and small. Give this creature two pairs of flippers, somewhat like those of a seal, and some idea may be formed of the elasmosaurus. In its native element, it must have presented an extraordinary spectacle, moving along its body far beneath the waves, with the slender, snake-like neck alone appearing above; now, perhaps, flying along at the surface, showing its entire form, lashing the blue water into foam in its attempts to take its prey. take its prey.

Such a monster must have been a formida

Such a monster must have been a formidable object to the men of the time, did they exist; and there is no good reason why they did not. Men of today attack the wheal, which attains a length of 100 feet; and three is reason to believe that, with weapons! of bone, stone and wood, the earliest man may have faced these prehistoric giants.

The elasmosaurus was a flesh-eater and preyed upon fishes and other marine animals; a fact proven by finding their remains between its ribs, in the sediment of the ancient Kansas sea.

What destroyed these glants is more or less a mystery; but owing to some cause the great sea, which is easily traced in the west, disap-peared or dried up, and the wondrus inhabi-tants of many kinds found themselves finally stranded, and were in ensuing years covered up by the sand and the dust, to be uncovered again by the men of the nineteenth century. DEAD NIGGER LUCK.

A Realistic Gambling Scene at an Alabama Railroad Camp.

Pay night at a railroad camp, a crowd of eager, dusky faces around a rough blanket-spread table in the woods. The smoky glare from coal-oil torches and spluttering pine knots fiffully lights the scene. The big table is crowded, young and old, big and little, man and wife, all eagerly watch-ing the rolling dice, while the "mass-nicker" calls. ing the rolling dice, while the "pass-picker" calls the game, is the description given in the Birming-

This is an utterly uncommend to the This is an utterly unwarranted insult. We do no want Mr. O'Rell's taunts paraded in our public want Mr. O'Rell's taunts paraded in our public journals. It is discourteous and ungrateful. Ah if we could only rise up and fling back the lie into his face! There is where the cruelty comes in He has done wrong, indeed, but, after all, he has told the truth. Wherever he went in this country he has heard so much private contempt expressed to the abilities and the character of our legislators that he probably failed to understand that we do not care to have his sympathy with our contempt too publicly exploited. We do not want the whole world to be acquainted with the scheme.

BLOOD ON THE MOON IN BARTOW COUNTY.

Will Tom Lyon and A. F. Woolley Get Together,

DUELLING RUMORS ARE RIFE.

Captain Nelms Summoned From Atlanta---Nothing Done as Yet.

There is blood on the moon in Bartow! Trouble is pending between Hon. Tom Lyon and Hon. A. F. Wolley-that was the information which reached Atlanta yesterday

And early yesterday Dr. J. W. Nelms, exprincipal keeper of the penitentiary, left hastily for Cartersville.

Summoned, it was given out, to take a hand In the correspondence or negotiations which were understood to be pending between the two gentlemen first named.

THE CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE. For some time past Mr. Lyon and Mr. Wolley have figured in newspaper correspon dence over the race for the commissionership of agriculture. Mr. Wolley is an inspector of tertilizers under Judge Henderson; Mr. Lyon is making a bitter fight against Judge Hender son and in favor of Mr. Nesbitt, one of the candidates for the judge's official shoes.

The controversy between Messrs. Lyon and Woolley, has been over a statement which Mr. Lyon charged Mr. Woolley with having made, and which Mr. Woolley disclaimed totally. The newspaper correspondence between these two gentlemen culminated in a card from Mr. Woolley in Sunday's Constitution in which

Mr. Woolley, among other things, said: If I woosey, among other things, said:

I have repeatedly denied this charge brought by T. J. Lyon, the first denial being made more than month ago, and Lyons has just seen fit at this late day to come out in a long tirade, and repeat these charges. I do say, and repeat most emphatically, that the whole thing emanated from T. J.
Lyon's fertile imagination, and there is no foundation whenever for the assertion. I pronounce it dation whatever for the assertion. I pronounce it an absolute, unqualified, unmitigated and malic-lous falsehood. If the people of the state knew T. J. Lyon as well as the citizens of Bartow county, I should not have noticed his card; but as it is barely possible that those not knowing him might give some credence to his aspertions, I thought proper to say this much.

The whole trouble with T. J. Lyon is that he is a disappointed office seeker. He applied to Judge Henderson for an appointment, and because he failed to be appointed he is venting his spleen minissioner by making false ac tions, and, I suppose, expects a place at the hands of Mr. Nesbitt for the dirty work he is doing in this campaign. Lyon was recently defeated overwhelmingly in his county before an alliance cor whemingly in his county before an alliance con-terior to pominate candidates for the legisla-ture, and charges me partly with his defeat, and this will account in a large measure for his malice towards me. I was born and reared in Bartow county, and my life has been a miserable failure, if anything T. J. Lyon might say or publish in re-gard to me could in the slightest degree traduce my character or detract from my standing with my character or detract from my standing with good citizens in the |community in which I am

TROUBLE WAS EXPECTED.

People who read the card on Sunday, said there must be trouble between the men. And sure enough, Doctor and Captain Nelms was sent for early yesterday and responded to the

His going was mysterious and it was impossible to learn by whom or for whom he was sent. The only thing that was positive, was that his mission had reference to the correspondence understood to be pending between Messrs Woolley and Lyon.

NOTHING DONE YET. Late last night, Mr. Douglas Wikle, THE

Constitution's correspondent at Cartersville,

This was the public oral examination of the graduating class of the Girls' High school. Quite a number of visitors were in attendance, and the examination was interesting and highly gratifying throughout. Today Browning hall will doubtless be crowded to the door. That was last year's experience, and there is every reason to believe that this season's success will be even greater. The graduating classes are larger, and—why not say it-both girls and boys are the loveliest, not say it—both girls and boys are the loveliest, smartest and best looking that ever received diplomas from the high schools.

At 9 o'clock this morning the calisthenic exercises by all the graduates of the Girls' High school will occur in the Browning hall. There is not a more interesting feature on the annual programme than this, and it goes without saying that the attendance of visitors will be large.

Immediately after the conclusion of the tallsthenics, the annual meeting of the literary alisthenics, the annual meeting of the literary and debating society of the Boys' High school will be called to order.

A very interesting programme has been gotten up, and the meeting will be one of the pleasantest commencement features. orrow the public school examination of

THE NEW WAGON

THAT HAS BEEN BUILT FOR THE POLICE FORCE.

One of the Handsomest and Best Vehicles of the Kind in the Country—Special Horses and Special Harness for It.

It is, sure enough, "one of the finest"-the new patrol wagon is.

For a week past the new wagon has been standing in a conspicuous place in the big re-pository of Mr. John M. Smith, on Wheat street, and it has attracted a great deal of Captain English, chairman of the board of police commissioners, has been there to see it. He has examined it throughout, and is highly pleased with the work. He says it is as fine as any similar vehicle in the country. The nicety of the workmanship and finish will compare well with fine carrieges or buggies.

fine carriages or buggies.

The body of the wagon is painted a dark, brilliant green, with bright gold striping and figuring. Along each side, in fancy gold letters, are the words "Police Patrol."

A rich carmine covers the wheels and running gear, which is delicately striped in black and white. The hubs of the wheels are set off by massive silver-plated bands and heavily silver-plated axle nuts with the imprint of the maker cut upon them.

The lines of the wagon are graceful, every brace being set to the best advantage for beauty, strength and economy of weight.

The cut is an accurate drawing of the wagon, the design being exactly similar to that from which the Philadelphia patrolwagon was built, except the Atlanta wagon lacks a light canopy top with which the Phila-dephia wagon is fitted. All the seats are upholstered in the best of russet leather, fastened tightly down with straps. Three compartments are arranged beneath the driver's seat, for carrying rubber coats and anything else of use about such a vehicle. Under the two long main seats are

A HANDSOME INSURANCE BUILDING.

Which Will be One of the Finest · in the Country,

A building to cost in the neighborhood of $500,000 will be erected in Atlanta by the Equitable Life Assurance society. Work is to-begin at once.

Negotiations for the purchase of a suitable site have been pending for some time, conducted on the part of the insurance company by Mr. George T. G. White, manager of the outhern department.

The deal has been made, and the work is to be pushed as rapidly as possible. The building will be headquarters for the Equitable Life in the south, and will be the only building of the sort in the south.

It will be, too, one of the handsomest structures in the city of Atlanta. MR. SID. PHELAN.

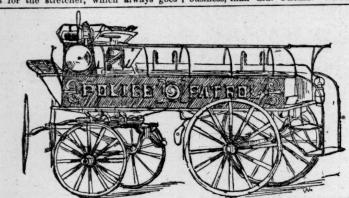

He Becomes a Citizen of Montgomery, Which is Montgomery's Gain. Mr. Sid. Phelan is now a citizen of Montomery, Ala.

He is in charge of the business of the Terminal company in that city.

Mr. Phelan originally came to this city from Montgomery. Since his coming here it is safe to say Atlanta had no more enterprising citizen, one truer in his frindships and reliable in business, than Sid. Phelan. Whenever the

with the wagon, guns, axes, fire apparatus, tools, etc. A small neat door is fitted in the back end of the left hand seat, for convenience in taking the stretcher out and returning it to its place. All these compart-ments are supplied with first-class locks. Along the backs of the seats run strong iron rails, to which prisoners may be fastened if expedient. These rails are finely silver-plated, the work being done by hand under Mr. Smith's personal supervision in his factory.

The rails at either side of the steps at the back end of the wagon are also silver-plated, while the interior of the body is handsomely grained in natural oak, highly polished.

A valuable feature of the turnout is the ambulance attachment. The stretcher is hung on four upright stanchions fitted with spiral springs to take up the vibra-tion. It hangs, when in position, between the two seats, but is so made as to be easily put out of the way under the seat when not

In use.

There is a large brass gong with foot attachment at the driver's side, and beside the two silver-plated lamps in front, a havy brass lantern is held by a hook and strap, ready for use, at the right side of the rear steps.

Altogether, the new patrol wagon is a fine piece of work. Just such a one as will go well with Atlanta's ralendid police force.

BELATED MARKETS.

Review of the Day in the Stock Market-Petroleum, Etc.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Petroleum opened steady, but after the first sales sagged off slowly and closed dull. The stock market today was quiet, but in the main strong, with a slow and steady appreciation of values throughout most of the day. The wait-ing attitude of operators is still maintained, but the moderate demand from the shorts with a limited quantity of long buying was sufficient in the absence of marked pressure by the bears to mark, fractionally, higher figures for most of the list. There was a short and feeble attempt in the list. There was a short and feeble attempt in the early dealings on the part of traders to get prices off by sharp attacks upon a few stocks, but the effect was not of much importance, and the raid was soon given up. Attention on the street is at present centred upon Washington, and the prosects of the silver bill at this session and possible changes in the sugar tariff are of most importance for the time being. There seems to be a small probability, that the suggestions of Mr. Blaine.

changes in the sugar tariff are of most importance for the time being. There seems to be a small probability that the suggestions of Mr. Blaine will be accepted, and that the feeling today acted as a stimulus to Sugar Refineries, which not only opened up one-half per cent, but afterward appreciated about two per cent more. Trading was large, both in the number of transactions and the aggregate of the number of shares which changed hands, but extreme fluctuations were not to be compared with these, to which we have become accustomed in this stock. In the regular list Chicago Gas and Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis were special objects of the early pressure and they yielded one per cent, but upon the cessation of the hammering fell, and a rapid recovery took place, while the rest of the list, which had sympathized to only a limited extent in the decline, soon were placed above the level of the opening prices. The news of the day was not of a particularly important nature, and while the feeling that the coming meeting of railroad magnates in this city must be productive of good to the market, there was no disposition to take hold in a vigorous manner. The expectation, however, is to see more active and a higher market after the 1st of July, a fair estimate of disbursements at that time being $90,000,00, a large proportion of which is expected to come into Wall street. As to relief to the street from the silver bill, however, there is a growing feeling of indifference, and that no legislation is preferable to free coinage. The close was quiet and firm, but at and something off from the best prices in most cases, Atchison and Missouri Pacific were strong features, and there is talk of a traffic agreement between them. Final changes are, in a large majority of cases, fractional gains, and Sugar was up 2%, Atchison 1½ and Missouri Pacific one per cent, the last named selling ex-dividend of one per cent, the last named selling ex-dividend of one per cent, the last named selling ex-dividend of one per cent,

The Sun's Cotton Review.

New York, June 23.—Futures declined sharply for the early months during the morning hour. Liverpool was decidedly lower for both spots and futures, and the former was very dull. The information given in this report during the past fortnight of the demoralization of holders of cotton at Liverpool is now fully confirmed, and the end is not yet. The next crop also declined, but not so much as the early months, and there was very good buying for January. There were again untimely rains in the Mississippi valley, and quite heavy about Vicksburg, but generally the weather was favorable to the new grop, and the "first bale" will soon be in order. Late in the day a partial recovery in values was made on the much demand to cover, but the market; showed no buoyancy. Cotton on spot was one-sixteenth of a cent lower and quiet. St. Joseph, Mo., June 23.—George C. McCrary, of Kansas City, died in this city this afternoon at the residence of his son-inlaw, Dr. C. Boteler. He had been afflicted for some time with a tumor in the stomach. Mr. McCrary was elected to congress in 1868, and served until March 1877. In 1876, Judge McCrary introduced in congress the electoral commission bill, which resulted in the choice of Rutherford B. Hayes as president. CROKER ON THE STAND. He Denies the Charges Made Against Him

New York, June 23.—The Fassett senate committee held a special session here today to take the testimony of Richard Croker, leader of Tammany hall. The chamber of the superior court, where the hearing took place, was filled to overflowing with a dense of Tammany hall. The chamber of the superior court, where the hearing took place, was filled to overflowing with a dense crowd of people. Patrick H. McCann and his wife, who is a sister of Mrs. Croker, were in the audience. All eyes centered on Mr. and Mrs. Richard Croker when they entered the room and took seats beside W. Bourke Cochran, Mayor Grant's lawyer. Mrs. Croker looked rather anxious, but chatted with Dr. Beekman. Croker did not betray much evidence of illness, but looked a little worried.

Croker was at once called to the stand, and after testifying at large, he remembered that Grant had stood godfather for his daughter Flossie, and had given her $5,000 on two occasions in bills and presents. It was not given by reason of a prior understanding with Mayor Grant. The money had been invested in October, 1889, in a house at One Hundred and Forty-Eighth street, for the benefit of the child, taking title in his own and his wife's name jointly.

Mrs. Croker was put upon the stand. She denied that she had ever told McCann that Croker had gone to Europe and left her unprovided for; that she had ever said Mayor Grant gave Flossie $25,000, or that she had ever sat up all night to guard $180,000 which had been raised to secure Grant's appointment as commissioner of public works.

FEAR IN WAYCROSS That Some Negroes May Be Goaded Into Lawlessness.

The negroes have been holding a caucus all day, and have been making threats. At a negro restaurant this evening they were holding a private meeting, when a negro woman passed by and heard the conversation that they intended to rule Waycross tonight. She at once told to rule Waycross tonight. She at once told the lady who she was cooking for, and she wrote a note to her husband, and told him what she had heard. The military was at once ordered out, and all the citizens. The negroes have no advantages over us, as we are all well

FEDERAL COURTS DENOUNCED.

The Minnesota Farmers' Alliance Criticises Some Noteworthy Decisions.

Some Noteworthy Decisions.

St. Paul, Minn., June 23.—The Minnesota Farmers' alliance issued an address to the people containing a remarkable attack on the supreme court of the United States. It says: Very recently a United States judge invaded a sovereign state, accompanied by an assassin, who murdered a citizen of that state. The supreme court stepped in and rescued the assassin, declaring that in such cases the law of the state against murder was of no avail. The state of New York condemned a murderer to death according to a law enacted by its legislature. A judge of the supreme court of the United States reached out his hand and took that criminal, that murderer, under his protection, declaring that a state could not punish its own murderers except by permission and in the manner prescribed by a federal court. The state of Minnesota created a railroad commission to stand between the people and the roads, to prevent the latter from exacting extortionate rates. These roads are the creation of the state, and hold their charters from the state. and the roads, to prevent the latter from exacting extortionate rates. These roads are the creation of the state, and hold their charters from the state. Yet this same supreme court has decided that these creations are greater than their creators; that a part is greater than the whole; that the state who made the roads has no power to regulate and govern them until they get permission from this autocrat tribunal of the American republic. In the case of the law prohibiting the sale of dressed beef, which your legislature passed to protect the public health, this same court has enacted the role of the school-master and descended to administer a lecture to your legislature, charging them with incincerity and lying, in that they justified the law on the ground of protecting the public health, when in reality the object of the law was something else. The Dred-Scott decision rendered the name of Taney infamous, for the reason that it made slavery mational and compelled freedmen to become slave-catchers. These judges aspire to even a greater sublimity of infamy, because their decisions contemplate the enslavement of the whole American people.

About Rev. Sam Small.—J. Wesley Hill, secretary of the board of trustees of the Utah university, is sending out cards announcing the election of Rev. Sam W. Small to the presidency of the school. The cards read:

"Kennesaw's Bombardment."—The new publication of Mr. Joseph M. Brown, traffic manager of the Western and Atlantic railroad, entitled "Kennesaw's Bombardment," is receiving many complimentary notices from the press throughout the country. Trinity Revival.—The revival at Trinity church began Sunday with a very large and enthusiastic attendance.

Yesterday Rev. M. B. Smith preached a most eloquent sermon to a large congregation. The good work is going on bravely, and a large number of persons expressed themselves as converted, and the meeting was full of the influence of the holy religion of Christ.

The meetings will continue during the week, and old Trinity will experience just such a revival of religion as has not teen in many a long day.

Whitlock's Case.—Dr. H. V. M. Miller, following the governor's instructions, has made an examination of Whitlock's condition. The doctor says that Whitlock is seriously sick, and that he is ready to make his report as soon as the governor calls for it.

The instructions to make the examination were made, it seems, under a misapprehension. Whitlock is not in the penitentiary now, but is out on bond.

Sons of Confederate Soldiers.—An entertainment, under the auspices of this association, will be given at the opera-house the evening of July 1st. It promises to be a most interesting affair. SUPREME COURT DECISIONS.

The Commencement Exercises of Emory College in Full Progress—The Award-ing of the Medals.

Oxford, Ga., June 23 .- [Special.]-A very beautiful day greeted the sophomores, this morning, in their exhibition. The weather was not so warm as before, and a large com pany filled the chapel church.

The exercises of the morning were opened by prayer from Dr. Simmons. After music from the Atlanta Zouave band—which, by the way, is giving unusual satisfaction with its exbellent music- the programme was begun by Mr. R. N. R. Bardwell, of Talbotton, Ga., who, in a graceful man ier, paid a beautiful tribute to 'Woman," written in Dr. Morgan Callaway's usual happy style.

Mr. M. T. Cleckly, of Augusta, Ga., came next with a selection from Sam Small's tem-perance speech at Evansville, Ind. He evinced much developed powers of declama-

Mr. W. G. Crawley, of Snapping Shoals, dramatically recited a "Thrilling Scene," by Mr. J. R. Dykes, of Marshallville, in one of the best efforts of the morning, gave J. J. Crittenden's address to the jury on the trial of Matt Ward for murder. Mr. J. V. Eakes, of Oxford, recited with much spirit and great success the old but ever humorous piece, "How Ruby Played." Mr. F. B. Murph, of Marshallville, one of the most graceful men on the stage, this morning well declaimed Wirt's famous speech on

"Burr and Bleunerhasset."
Mr. M. M. Parks, of Oxford, delivered in pleasing style Senator Edwards' speech on

"War Relics."
Mr. J. A. Sharp, of Walesca, payed a deserved compliment to Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald in selecting for his declamation an extract from Bishop Fitzgerald's oration on Andrew Jack-

Son.

Mr. J. S. Sherman, of Lumpkin, attracted the attention of the audience, and held it by his excellent rendering of Daniel Webster's speech on the murder of White. This has been spoken very often by boys at Emory, as elsewhere, but rarely in a better style than by Mr. Sherman.

The declamation of the morning was not as good as the usual sophomore declamation here, but was nevertheless marked by several exceptional speeches. Of these, the best were those of Messrs. Cook, Eakes and Sherman, and between these three, in your correspondceptional speeches. Of these, the best were those of Messrs. Cook, Eakes and Sherman, and between these three, in your correspondent's judgment, the two medals will lie.

The meeting of the Georgia Methodist Historical association was not held this afternoon, as is usual. The champion debate tonight between selected members of the Few and Phi Gamma societies, took place. The question for discussion was "Resolved, that the Western and Atlantic railroad should be sold." The affirmative was championed by Messrs. C. R. Williams, Columbus, Ga.; T. Fort, Lumpkin, Ga., and O. L. Kelley, Atlanta, Ga. Their argument was rebutted by Messrs. E. M. Landrum, Vinita, I. T., J. E. Dickey, Atlanta, Ga.; and H. S. Bradley, Jr., Griffin, Ga.

The debate was a good one and showed earnest thought and careful preparation on the part of all. Mr. Williams, for the affirmative, discussed the right of a state to own the road with reflections on such a policy, the state to the state of the state of the control of the cont on the part of all. Mr. Williams, for the affirmative, discussed the right of a state to own the road with reflections on such a policy, showing its defects, and the injustice of a soverign state entering into inevitable competition with its citizens. He further attempted to show that this policy had in the past retarded the building of railroads. Mr. Landrum, from the negative, also discussed this constitutional point replying to the preceding argument. Mr. Fort discussed the financial phase of the question, showing the expense the road has been to the people, and will be in the future, and hence the advantages of the sale over the lease.

Mr. Dickey in reply took up the same phase of the question, holding, however, to the negative, that the best prosperity of the state demanded the retention of the road. Mr. Kelley based his part of the argument on the needs based his part of the argument on the needs of the public schools, showing that Georgia, with her income for with her income for from the road, yet has rest system of public schools of any state in the south.

Mr. Bradley replied to Mr. Kelley on the same line, upholding the good of the road to the schools in the state.

The debate was very interesting in all its features. Georgia Female Seminary GAINESVILLE, Ga., June 23 .- [Special.]-Never in the history of the institution has the Georgia Fernale seminary known such a brilliant com-mencement season as the one through which it is now passing. The city is filled with visitors from all parts of the state, and all seem to be enjoying the exercises. This is a season at which the peo-ple of south and middle Georgia delight to come to Gainesville, and many have made it convenient to be here during commencement. On Friday night Professor Van Hoose gave the annual reception to the senior and junior classes. The large parlors of the seminary were beautifully decorated, and the light from the chandeliers fell upon as merry a throng as ever assembled to cele brate the close of the school. The spacious cam-pus was lighted by electricity and the wide walks afforded pleasant promenades. The re-ception was a grand success and the young men, especially, are indebted to Professor and Mrs. Van Hoose for a delightful evening. Sunday morning the large clapel was filled to oyerflowing to hear the sermon by Rev. R. H. Harris, Columbus, Ga. His reputation had preceded him, and the audience expected a treat. Nor were they disappointed. A finer discourse was never heard in Gainesville. His subject was never heard in Gainesville. His subject was "Woman 2Why She Ought to Be a Christain." From beginning to the end, the large congregation was charmed, and many were the congratulations bestowed upon the gifted speaker at the close of the services. The music was magnificent. A chorus of about seventy-five young ladies, sustained by a number of bass and tenor voices, gave music suitable for the occasion. The solos of Misses Oviatt, Annie Dorsey, Laura Merck and Nellie Dobbs in the grand Te Deum, showed remarkable talent and cultivation. Today the senior class tree exercises occur, and tonight the annual concert.

The Elberton Commencement. ELBERTON, Ga., June 23.—[Special.]—The commencement exercises of the Elberton institute were opened yesterday with a splendid sermon from Rev. Charles Lane, D.D., of Atlanta, Ga. The large new Methodist church here was crowded to overflowing and many had to be turned away for the want of room. Many visitors are present from addigining Many visitors are present from adjoining counties. Today Dr. Lane delivered a lecture at the celebration of the Henry Grady society. Dr. Lane has made a fine impression on our people.

The commencement promises to be a complete success in every particular and Elberton is justly proud of her magnificent school. The South Georgia College.

Installment plan. It is not often such an oppor tunity is presented for purchase of a cheap home at small price and easy monthly payments, or for large profits on a small investment, as that arranged by Krouse & Welch in their action sale of fifty-three beautiful Pryor Hill addition lots. The manufacturing and other large industries in operation or assured, and the important public improvements pending in the vicinity of this property, insures a rapid advance and active demand for these lots. The terms are so easy that any one may purchase. For instance, on a cash investment of $50 in one of these lots at say $200, balance easy monthly payments, with a prospect of selling at an advance of 25 per cent in a short time, the purchaser would have a profit of 100 per cent on amount of original cash investment. Somebody will be sharp-enough to see this. Sale 4 p. m. Tuesday 24th. Take Fryor street dummy every twenty minutes.

If you are going to New York or Boston be sare and go via Central R. R. of Ga., and thence its elegant steamers. Rates, including meals and stateroom on steamer, from Atlants, are $34; round trip, $43.50.

COMMENCEMENT OPENS IN GRAND

The Sermon on Sunday—The Young Folks Entertain Today—A Brilliant Pro-gramme for Tomorrow.

ATHENS, Ga., June 23.—[Special.]—Lucy Cobb institute is now in the midst of the glories of commencement season. And moreover it promises to be the most accessful in the history of the institution Many a commencement has come and gone; many have been the beautiful scenes enacted at that chapel; many have been the arrays of beauty and grace in the halls of this famous institution; but none have surpassed and few have equaled that which is now being presented to the large audiences that daily throng the equaled that which is now being presented to the large audiences that daily throng the chapel.

The institute is just closing its most prosperous year. It has had an immense roll of scholars. It has numbered among its scholars this year young ladies from every quarter of the union, and its prospects for next year seem to be brighter than ever.

Sunday morning the commencement exercises opened with the annual sermon, which was preached by Rev. C. C. Williams, of Augusta. The chapel was thronged to its utmost capacity. After choice music, Mr. Williams took his text from the parable of the ten virgins, five of whom were wise and kept their lamps trimmed and burning, while five were foolish and had no oil in their lamps when the bridegroom came. He paid a beautiful tribute to the guiding and noble influence of woman, and of the power which it exerted over the destinies of mankind.

He admonished each of the fair young graduates as she went forth from the halls of their alma mater never to forget that they had a work to do, and to ever keep the talents which the Lord had given them earnestly at work for good. He said that the noblest and most enduring monuments which one can leave are not those upon which we carve our own names, but those which bear no marks of personalty. The great pyramid of Egypt, which is one of

during monuments which one can leave are not those upon which we carve our own names, but those which bear no marks of personalty. The great pyramid of Egypt, which is one of the most remarkable monuments of antiquity, was reared by hands now unknown, and planned by a mind whose owner has left no trace behind him.

Thus he advised each one to carve upon the world around them her life work, even as the sculptor boy carved upon the enduring marble the angel vision which passed before him.

Last night the chapel was the scene of a sacred concert in which the young ladies participated. Choice and beautiful songs were sung, and in praise and thanksgiving the invocation from the entire audience went up to the throne on high for the blessing of the allwise God to be showered upon the young ladies and their commencment exercises.

This morning the young folks entertained the large audience which had assembled. It was a beauteous sight. On the stage were arranged the contestants arrayed in white and ready for the contest. It was a contest of rare excellence. It deserved all the praise given it, and that praise was unbounded.

Atlanta are the principal topics of talk on

Will Atlanta have cause to kick as did

These are the queries that one hears on every block, and the fact is more apparent than ever before that Atlanta is interested in the census, and the people are anxious to help the enumerators out.

The enumerators have entered fully into the spirit of their work, and the citizens have helped them in the count with such considera-that Atlanta's was decidedly more rapid than any city in the state, having increased 15,611 within the ten years by the census count.

During that time Chattanooga increased from 6,093 to 12,892; Memphis decreased from

THE WEST POINT TERMINAL CASE

Until the 17th of July-The Board of Examiners of the Western and Atlantic at Work on Their Report.

This is one of the most important cases that the commission were ever called upon to deal with, not only in its direct effect, but indirectly as well.

The Central, the East Tennessee, the Richmond and Danville, and the Georgia Pacific are called upon "to show cause why they should not come under the operation of Rule I, governing the transportation of freight." That rule is:

That rule is:
All connecting roads which are under the management and control, by lease, ownership, or otherwise, of one and the same company, shall for purposes of transportation, in applying this tariff, be considered as constituting but one and the same road, and the rates shall be computed as upon parts of one and the same road, unless otherwise specified.

This the roads seem to appreciate thoroughly,

s it seriously affects their revenue.

And the consideration is that an adverse decision by the commission would form a basis for hurtful legislation at the hands of the next general assembly.

President John H. Inman, of the Terminal company, has also been notified to appear when the case is argued.

A Protest.

Captain "Tip Harrison, at the executive department, is still busy with pension applications. He registered ninety-eight of them yesterday, the accumulation of several days, id remarked as he finished the last one: "That's a peculiar list-ninety-eight names

THE REMAINS SENT HOME.

Last evening the remains of Miss Anna Rosa, who died at No. 57 Loyd street, were shipped to Georgetown, S. C., for burial, by Undertakers C. H. Swift & Co.

Of course the proprietors of this valuable remedy would wrong themselves if they made the secret of their cure public property. Why should its composition be considered so long as proves it an effectual remedy and as easily obtainable of druggists as is quinine. Many people who buy and use quinine don't know it is made from Peruvian bark. They don't care to know. They know it nearly always cures the chills and fever, and that is all they want it for. So too, the people know that Smith's Tonic Syrup is better than quinine. They know it cures chills and fever when quinine fails. They know also that Smith's Tonic Syrup will break up a cold or an attack of influenza, la grippe, etc., quicker than any other drug. They know also that it is pleasant to take and never leaves any unpleasant after effect. They know also that it can be used as a substitute for quinine and always with more satisfactory results.

This was done, and after several physicians had testified, Judge Richard H. Clark decided that the showing of the defense was sufficient to warrant a continuance of the case for the term.

People often ask the question of me: "Why is it you are always busy selling while other houses are doing nothing?" The answer is easy. I keep what the trade wants and sell goods close. No startling bargains; no gorgeous array of imported fabrics gathered from every clime under heaven; no magnificent stock bought from a manufacture weather clothing in great variety.

WHAT THE OFFICERS ARE DOING IN THE WARM MONTHS.

The Board of Health and the Sanitaay Chief Say the City is Healthy and Clean—The Sale of the Stockade Farm.

What of the sanitary condition of Atlanta The board of health says it was never better. Is the city clean?

The chief sanitary inspector says it was never cleaner. Since the warm weather began there has been considerable talk about Atlanta's clean-

Consequent upon the discussion of the clean iness are queries as to the city's health. But the more the subject is agitated, the ore apparent is the good health for which Atlanta is known throughout the country.

"I know," said Hon. John Tyler Cooper yesterday, "that there are predictions of sickness, bad health, etc., but these are like many other predictions, untrue." Mr. Cooper is a member of the board of health and was sitting in the health office as "The mild weather we have just had," continued Mr. Cooper, "was productive of many prophecies. It was said that a warm winter neant a sickly summer and so on. These stories naturally attracted attention, and since this excessively warm weather began, they have been recalled and the stories of sickness

"But is there any truth in them?" "None whatever. The sanitary force never worked harder than it is working now, and from actual observation I know that the city was never cleaner."

'But there are complaints as to localities.' "There was never a service so thorough that complaints could be precluded. Still complaints are as often without foundation as with it. In the sanitary limits the entire force is at work constantly. Outside of the city the sanitary ordinances of the city are closely and carefully enforced by the sanitary department and by the police force." During Mr. Cooper's dissertation upon the city's sanitary condition, Chief Sanitary Inector Veal entered the room. "I can say," he remarked, as Mr. Cooper ceased speaking, "that Atlanta never was cleaner. I have been connected with this department for years, and I think I ought to know what I am talking about. "Have you heard any complaints?" he was asked. "None of any consequence. I have in my work forty carts and two two-horse wagons. These make five trips each a day. That is two hundred and ten loads of refuse matter hauled out of the city each day. Every lot in the sanitary limits is visited from two to three times each week, and those in the heart of the city where filth is more in the heart of the city where filth is more liable, boarding-houses and restaurants, for instance, are visited oftener."

"And you think the city clean?"

"It was never cleaner, I tell you. Why, only four cases have been made in the police court in weeks for a violation of the sanitary laws. Still we are not resting quietly. Our entire force is working hard and watching constantly."

The sale of the stockade tarm now appears a certainty.

The special committee, however, has taken no formal action upon the sale.

The committee having the bids in charge is composed of Mr. Woodward, Mr. Howell, Mr. Kontz, Mr. Hulsey and Mr. King. By each of these gentlemen the bids have been considered and reliable real estate agents have been consulted. It seems that the price offered, $600 an acre, is considered a fine valuation for the land. The committee will meet this week and dis-

an Stewart Writes That He Will Do His Best for It.

Do His Best for It.

Congressman Stewart, of this district has written a letter to friends in Atlanta stating that he will do his best to get an appropriation for the proposed road to Fort McPherson.

He has received the petition forwarded him by a number of the prominent business men of Atlanta, urging him to make an effort to get an appropriation sufficient to do the work.

He thinks that it will be a hard matter to get anything, and that he ought not to be expected to do much, without the recommendation of the secretary of war, but he hopes to get this. It is to be hoped that he will be successful, and that the road will be constructed as soon as possible. The present road to the post makes it dangerous for citizens of Atlanta to drive there as they would like to do, it paralleling the Central railroad from Whitehall street crossing at West End, all the way to the post.

If the new road is built, it will make a splendid drive, and fort McPherson will become one of the most popular resorts about the city.

Congressman Stewart has secured several come one of the most popular resorts about the city.

Congressman Stewart has secured several important appropriations for Atlanta, and our people will have additional reason to feel grateful if he secures this one.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For several years, in the spring months, I used to be troubled with a drowsy, tired feeling, and a dull pain in the small of my back, so bad, at times, as to prevent my being able to walk, the least sudden motion causing me severe distress. Frequently, boils and rashes would break out on various parts of the body. By the advice of friends and my family physician, I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla and continued it till the poison in my blood was thoroughly eradica-ted."—L. W. English, Montgomery City, Mo.
"My system was all run down; my skin rough and of yellowish hue. I tried various remedies, and while some of them gave me temporary relief, none of them did any permanent good. At last I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, continuing it exclusively for a considerable time, and am pleased to say that it completely

"For years I suffered from scrotula and blood diseases. The doctors' prescriptions and several so-called blood-purifiers being of no avail, I was at last advised by a friend to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I did so, and now feel like a new man, being fully restored to health."—C. N. Frink, Decorah, Iowa.

professor of agriculture shall from time to time deliver in different sections of the state "Popular Lectures on Agriculture and Hort-culture." It is the purpose of the board of trustees that this feature of our contract with the state shall be utilized at the earliest practicable moment. Under Dr. White's able management, it is confidently expected that these lectures will bring the agricultural college into direct contact with a great body of farmers, and by making them acquainted with what the college has done and is doing, to teach the people how to apply science to agriculture, they will be led to love and cherish an institution specifically designed for their own good. The other stipulation to which I allnde is that the president of the agricultural college shall make reports to the governor of the state, calling attention to any new discoveries in the science of mechanical arts which may be of special interest to the agriculture of the state. No provision is made, it is true, for the publication of these reports of Dr. White, but we all feel sure that his reports will be of such intrinsic value that the public press will be given the state of special information. Dr. White is a keen observer of the progress of human knowledge and will not fail to detect whatever is of special value to the progress of the state, but our people were so engrossed with politics and other such pay attention to them, but with the progress of the discussion through the press, it is believed that now courses of well-conceived and well-delivered lectures on the application of science to agriculture as the very bost plan and reli-delivered lectures on the application of science to agriculture as the very bost plan and reli-delivered lectures on the application of science to agriculture as the very bost plan and reli-delivered lectures on the application of science to agriculture as the very bost plan and reli-delivered lectures on the application of science to agriculture as the very bost plan and reliable to the professor of agri

THE STATE UNIVERSITY

CHANCELLOR BOGGS AND PRO-FESSOR WHITE INTERVIEWED.

The New Board of Trustees-The State College of Agricultural and Me-chanic Arts.

It has been a year of change and reform with the university, and with it all the condition of affairs has grown brighter and better.

A new board of trustees, a new chancellor, a new system of examinations, several new professors, a different commencement programme, a reorganization of the State College of Argi-

a reorgalization of the State College of Argi-culture and Mechanic Arts, and aproposed re-organization of the entire university—these are the changes which show that the old university is receiving a perfect reju-venation, which is destined to place her in the very fore-front of American colleges.

For the change in the board of trustees, the university is indebted to Hon. Clark Howell, who drafted the bill which passed the legislature and made the reorganization of the board possible.

In conversation with a number of the faculty, there could be found not a single utterance save praise for Mr. Howell.

The good results flowing from his bill and its passage are apparent on all sides.

In regard to the other changes much praise is due to the members of the faculty who, in their untiring efforts, have done much towards bringing the university to its present high standard.

DR. BOGGS TALKS.

DR. BOGGS TALKS. In a conversation with Chancellor Boggs, your correspondent learned much which will be of interest to the people of the state.

"How does the reorganization of the board of trustees influence the university?" was asked

"What about the reorganization of the university?"

"In the first place, the board of trustees have

"In the first place, the board of trustees have taken such order as will carry out to the very letter every stipulation in the agreement of 1872, between Governor Smith, representing the state, and the then board of trustees, as representatives of the university. This agreement calls for the distinct organization of the agricultural college with its own president, and with certain departments of study, all of which are designed to carry out the intent of congress in passing the landscript act of 1862. That is to say, they called for the teaching in the agricultural college of those branches of science which bear upon agriculture.

"In the course of years, somelof these stipuations seem to have been forgotten and to have dropped out of sight. But when the new chancellor came into office, it of course became his duty to inform himself thoroughly with regard to the contract of 1872.

specifically to the development and interests of the agricultural college, I shall count largely upon the well-known abilities and ex-perience of Dr. White. In this way it is ex-pected that agricultural education in the unipected that agricultural education in the university will be made so prominent and clear as to induce our intelligent farmers to send their sons to us in increasing numbers.

"The practical application of the sciences required in the university will be exemplified, as we hope, on the college farm; but the practical use of science for the purpose of making crops is by no means the whole use of education to the farmer.

"Leading, as he does, an isolated life, necessarily deprived of that daily and almost hourly

"Leading, as he does, an isolated me, necessarily deprived of that daily and almost hourly contact with his fellow men, which is enjoyed by those who live in towns and cities, the farmer should find in reading and in books that companionship which is so needful for his happiness and development.

"As time goes on, we hope to make it more and more plain to the people of Georgia that the very education which will make the farmer successful and happy can be found in the university. The agricultural college is manned by a corps of able and experienced teachers. To these we propose adding the manner of the successful and the succes ture will meet with widespread favor throughout the state. The truth is that we have an excellent institution in this university, and it is impossible that the people of the state should be well informed about it without feeling the deepest interest in the university and its college."

"How about the plan for the enlargement of the university?"

"Along with the determination to organize and equip the State College of Agriculture, I might also mention that the board of trustees at its last session has, in the judgment of the faculty, taken a long step in advance by adopting a plan for the general development of the whole university. This plan was suggested by Mr. W. W. Thomas, chairman of the prudential committee of the board, and having been carefully drawn up by a committee of the faculty, was submitted to the whole faculty for approval. After being amended by the faculty in several important particulars, the 'plan of enlargement' was unanimously approved by the faculty and sent to every member of the board of trustees for consideration before the meeting of that body. The result has been gratifying in the highest degree to every member of the faculty. By adopting the 'plan of enlargement' the board of trustees have set before us a high ideal towards which in course of years we shall be able, with the blessing of Providence, by degrees to bring the whole organization of the university. The plan is in no sense revolutionary, nor is it new. Every feature of it has been in successful operation; much of it for centuries. We can only claim credit for having adopted the best things with which we were acquainted in other universities; and for uniting them in our own university. And the plan is so skilfully devised that each new feature can be engrafted upon what we now have; so that the growth of the university will be like that of an oak tree, natural, conservative and healthful. New chairs are to be added as we can find the means, and the system of fellowship that has proved to be a source of such great strength to of trustees influence the university?"was asked him.

"All recognized authorities on the subject of university organization," he said, "insist on having a small number of trustees in whose hands the ultimate power shall be vested. Sir William Hamilton, in his famous discussion on university organization, takes the ground that in no case should the governing body include more than seven members, and that experience has proven that three are better than seven. The reasons for this are obvious, the chief being that divided responsibility is not our citizens.

"The philanthropists of England and of the north have been for a generation building their monuments in the shape of educational institutions, which are infinitely nobler and more enduring than marble or bronze. The trustees, therefore, did wisely in the judgment of the faculty to begin by recognizing in a fitting manner the debt of gratitude long due from the university and the state at large to the liberality of Governor Milledge, by erecting to his honor a monument in the shape of "The Milledge Chair of Ancient Languages." They have directed that every catalogue which goes forth shall quietly set before the minds of our youth the services of this honored Georgian to the university, by calling attention to the fact that to him we are indebted as to the greatest benefactor and friend to education in Georgia.

"It is confidently believed that this recognition of a gratitude to Mr. Milledge will suggest to prosperous citizens in the commonwealth how easy it is to earn the immortal gratitude of posterity by endowments in the university. By establishing separate fellowships, each of which may bear the donor's name, it is made perfectly practicable for a family to establish here a deathless memorial at the very small cost of not more than five thousand dollars, and thus the university by its very organization will grow in time to be an epitome of the history of Georgia, and a lasting record of her noble philanthropists.

"The habit of endowing literary institutions once formed grows into surprising results, and it is not extravagant to expect that in the course of time private liberality will supply onr citizens.
"The philanthropists of England and of the clude more than seven members, and that experience has proven that three are better than seven. The reasons for this are obvious, the chief being that divided responsibility is not felt. What is every man's business is nobody's concern.' I regard, therefore, the reduction of the number of the board a most important result of Mr. Howell's bill. As matters now stand, about as many members are actually present as used to be when the number was more than forty. The zeal of the body for the good of the university was shown by their unremitting labor amid the discomforts of the first severe spell of heat during the season. The fact is, that if the trustees could spare the time, it would be far better if they should meet in the autumn, when the season is propitious. We, of the faculty, are delighted with the spirit and temper of the body, eagerly inquiring into the university, and the manifest purpose to do everything to encourage the faculty and to lift the university to a higher plane of scholarship and usefulness. We regard the board as in every sense a fitting exponent of the intelligence and patriotism of Georgia."

"What about the reorganization of the uni-

and it is not extravagant to expect that in the course of time private liberality will supply every need of a great and fully equipped university. Not to be too tedious, I will say to you what I had the pleasure of saying in my last interview with the board of trustees, that their recent session has filled the hearts of the their recent session has filled the hearts of the faculty with confidence in the future of the university, and we can part, all resolved in no sense to be behind the board to advance the interest of this great institution entrusted to us to the very utmost of our nower."

of our power.' Professor H. C. WHITE INTERVIEWED.
Professor Henry C. White, the newlyelected President of the State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, and one of the most distinguished scientists in the union, was to inform himself thoroughly with regard to the contract of 1872.

"For this purpose I had a correct copy made from the records of the board of the whole transaction, and after carefully studying it, I was able to call the attention of the new board to various points at which our usuage had diverged from the written contract. The evidence was all laid before the board in its meeting, and hence, in view of all the facts, they have ordered a distinct organization of the agricultural college, with all the chairs specified and with Dr. Henry C. White as its president. Prof. L. H. Charbonnier is placed at the head of the literary side of the university as "faculty of arts," exactly as Dr. White is in the agricultural college, whenever the interests of the whole university are involved in the action contemplated, the entire faculty will be called together for consultation, and thus the unity of the university will be preserved. In whatever pertains specifically to the development and interests of the agricultural college, I shall count largely, upon the well-known abilities and extends to education generally, for it is the distinct and decided intention of the more converged as to the early upon the well-known abilities and extends to education generally, for it is the distinct and decided intention.

This encouragement extends to education generally, for it is the distinct and decided intention of the university at this time to put itself in harmony with and in line with all the educational agencies of the state.

"The present chancellor, Dr. Boggs, is a wise, conservative and yet proges-sive man, fully alive to the educa-cational needs of our whole people and fully competent to advise judiciously in all matters concerning them. His administra-tion of the internal affairs of the university for tion of the internal affairs of the university for the past year has been entirely successful and satisfactory, and the plans which he has pro-posed for continuing and increasing the useful-ness of the university, and by its means raising the grade of education generally in the state, are thoroughly wise and in my judgment entirely practicable. I would like to add that the personal qualities of the present chancellor are such as genuinely endear him to his col-leagues and the students as a brave, just and loyable man.

"The board of trustees did me the honor to re-"The board of trustees did me the honor to request me to accept the presidency of the State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. I did so, with the expressed and firm determination to make it as a co-ordinate department of the state university, a genuine college of agriculture, devoted to the training of men in these branches of education, which would fit them to become enlightened, well-equipped, thoughtful and successful farmers.

"It is my firm conviction that no better arrangement could be desired than the co-ordination of a college devoted to education in

A farmer's son, and a farmer himself, is of equal dignity in the community with the man of any profession. An agricultural college should be of equal dignity with a college training men in any profession. The university of Georgia proposes that the college of agriculture shall stand on a plan as high as that reached by any of its departments, be they literary, scientific or professional.

"With this, equal dignity gives equal efficiency and proficiency. The state college is organized thoroughly, and is prepared to instruct, so far as its means permit, in all the special branches relating to agriculture and mechanic arts.

"We have gone still further. Recognizing hope that we may soon be in a condition to put the plan into operation in its entirety. We not only hope that we may, but believe that we will, and I may furthermore add that we intend that we shall, if hard work on the part of the officers of the institution and constant appeals to the enlightenment and the liberality and the patriotism of our people, have power to bring about the result which we desire."

Thus it seems that the old university is on an upward move.

Her professors have taken on new hope, and are bestirring themselves with renewed energy. Her trustees are bending to the work with increased strength; her students are realizing that at last the ideal of state education has been reached in our university; and with one accord they are moving the grand old college on and on in her triumphal march, which signalizes the victory of education in Georgia.

Local-Nothing doing. Hubbard, Price & Co.'s Circular.

NEW YORK, June 23—[Special.]—The Liverpool market this morning was expected to be lower, but surpassed the hopes of the most pessimistic. Spot sales were only 6,000 bales. Futures opened 1.64d lower, but under pressure of heavy sales by weak longs continued to decline, and closed easy at 4.64æ5.64d decline on the summer months and 2.64d less on new cross. The response, here was at 4-64@5-64d decline on the summer months and $2-64d less on new crops. The response here was pronounced, and the decline on the opening was $13@15 points. July being the weakest position and August the one in which there was the greatest activity, the opening prices were, however, the lowest, and the very free offerings were absorbed readily, advancing August to 11.70. The close was steady, at within 2 points of the highest. A very large number of August, variously estimated at from 20,000 to 30,000 bales, have passed into the hands of two firms, and rumor is acain mated at from 20,000 to 30,000 bales, have passed Into the hands of two firms, and rumor is again rife as to their intentions. Freight room for 5,000 bales has been engaged here, and some 7,000 bales will be shipped from New Orleans. The rapid depletion of the stock in this country is calculated to deter short selling, and as the market is now 1 cent below the highest figures reached, it seems a feasible and tempting operation to again advance the summer positions, provided any support can be secured from abroad. New crops continue conspicuously firm, considering the weakness of the picuously firm, considering the weakness of the ear positions, notwithstanding the fact that crop ecounts continue brilliant in the extreme. Hubbard, Price & Co. By Telegraph.
